Introduction To Trauma-Informed Practices

Childhood Education International is pleased to offer this micro-course, in partnership with the Center for Learning in Practice, to all practitioners looking to increase their understanding of trauma and trauma-informed practices.

Children who have experienced trauma need caregivers who understand trauma and the impact it can have on their vulnerable and developing brains and their physical bodies. Caring and responsive caregivers are essential for children's healing. By the end of this micro-course, you will:

- Have a working understanding of what trauma is and why it is important to learn about
- Be able to identify the different types of trauma
- Understand how self care is a critical component to trauma-informed work.

This introductory course is free of charge. Contact us to learn more about our upcoming in-depth courses and about available CEU options: headquarters@acei.org.

TIME REQUIRED:

- It will take 1-2 hours, on average, to complete this introductory course.
- This is a self-paced course, so you are welcome to spend as much time as you need and as your schedule allows.

Orientation to the Platform & to this Micro-Course

Welcome to Introduction to Trauma-Informed Practices! This is the first part of a series on trauma-informed practices.

We take as a starting point YOUR context and YOUR experience. Everything offered in this course is just that: an offering that you adjust to suit your needs and the needs of those you are supporting. What you read or see in this course may or may not reflect what you are experiencing in your practice; therefore, we ask you to engage in this course with a critical eye and decide which parts of what is offered help you expand your knowledge and find opportunities for growth in your professional practice. Most important, we encourage you to dig deeply into the application and reflection pieces of the course, as these will provide the greatest opportunity for learning in your own context and for the development of approaches, tools, and connections that will best support your work and your students' learning.

When you come to the end of the micro-course, you will be asked to complete a brief course survey and a short evaluation. You must complete these in order to receive your certificate of completion.
